Truman, Congress May Clash Over Draft Act

SOME SOLONS
FAVOR STOPPING
INDUCTIONS NOW

President Wants Selective Service To Continue

TRAINING ALSO ISSUE

Chief Executive Plans To Recommend Peacetime
Military Training

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17—Congressional sources predicted today that President Truman and congress will have their first major clash over continued drafting of men for the Army.

Mr. Truman has ordered continued induction of 50,000 men a month, compared with the recent rate of 80,000.

Senate and house military af-airs committee leaders have expressed a desire to stop inductions immediately. But the President told reporters yesterday that he saw no reason why some of the young men who aren't doing anything right now shouldn't relieve the men at the front so they can return.

He said the draft would be continued until replacements are sufficient to send veterans home from the occupation fronts.

His added remark that congress must decide how long the draft will operate, indicated that some form of compromise may be in the air.

Just before a 30-minute conference with Mr. Truman this week Chairman Andrew J. May, D., Ky., of the house military affairs committee, said he would offer legislation to stop induction as soon as congress reconvened.

After the meeting, May said he would hold up the legislation until the matter had been considered by his committee, which will meet
Aug. 27.

May said in an interview that the committee will discuss all phases of demobilization, but declined to comment further on stopping the draft.

Other congressional sources pointed out that if congress abolished the draft law, it would wipe out local draft boards which have an important role in veterans' re-employment.

Mr. Truman also may find himself at odds with congress on his forthcoming recommendations for peacetime military training. He told newsmen yesterday that he would make such recommendations shortly after congress reconvenes but he warned against calling the program peacetime conscription.

Strong congressional sentiment for a peacetime training program existed before defeat of Germany.
But it dwindled to some extent after the Nazi surrender, and now, with the war ended, it is expected to take a big slump.

One house member said the only training measure that would have a chance of approval would be one combining educational features—accepted for college credits—and training. And that, he said, would have to be under civilian administration.

Save Ration
Books, OPA
Tells Users

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17—The Office of Price Administration said today that consumers shouldn't throw away their gasoline ration books and the green stamps in their food ration books.
While no longer needed for buying gasoline, those A, B and C books still will be of help to motorists wanting tires.

A new system of tire rationing, based on occupational driving requirements rather than type of gasoline ration book held by the motorist, has gone into effect.
However, retention of the old gasoline books will expedite the granting of tire purchase certificates since ration boards can use them in determining occupational needs.

As for the green stamps in ration book four, you had better hang on because these are the future meat rationing stamps. The green stamps originally were intended to replace the blue stamps which became obsolete when canned goods rationing ended.

No more ration books will be printed. OPA advised that airplane stamps for buying shoes also be wisely used until it is determined how long shoe rationing will continue.

'BUCK ROGERS'
AIR AGE HERE

Arnold Discloses New Huge
Bomber, Rockets Now
Being Manufactured

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17—Gen.
Henry H. Arnold today revealed existence of a new Army super-bomber with a range two and one-half to three times greater than the B-29.

He said it would cover all of Asia, the Pacific and the Atlantic from present U. S. bases. The new bomber has not been named.

The commanding general of the air forces said the Army also has rockets that will be automatically drawn to a target by the presence of heat, light or metal in the target zone.

He said these weapons, coupled with the atomic bomb, have brought the "Buck Rogers" conception of air power into reality.

Future security of the United States and the peace of the world depends on air superiority resulting from progressive research aided by the country's scientists and industries, he continued.

Arnold said the scientists who developed the atomic bomb showed what they could do when given money and facilities.

Reminded that he once advocated a separate air force, Arnold said he is now a proponent of one government defense department in which land, seas and air forces would be co-equal.

Asked whether the air forces had

20 INJURED IN FIGHTING IN BUENOS AIRES

BUENOS AIRES, Aug. 17—Twenty persons were injured in a series of gun fights between Democrats and Nationalists last night and early today.

The most serious incident occurred when Democrats attacked the Alianza Nacionalista building, only 85 yards from the United Press offices.

The assault began shortly after midnight when a small group of Democratic sympathizers set off a powerful bomb at the door of the Alianza Nacionalista.

They fired one hundred or more shots at the windows. The fire was returned from inside the building.
Several demonstrators were wounded. Shooting continued for more than an hour. Rifles, automatic pistols and revolvers flared in the darkness.

War Department Plans
'Helpful Shove' To GIs
Released From Service

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17—The War department promised today that every one of the 5,000,000 soldiers scheduled for demobilization within the next year will receive a "helpful shove" in his reorientation back to civilian life.

By the end of this year, American troops will be pouring into 27 separation centers at the rate of 500,000 per month. There they will spend their last 48 hours in the Army.

After the soldier is quartered, the next step is a call to turn in all non-essential equipment. Then he goes to the clothing warehouse where he gets two new complete uniforms, if needed. One is cotton and one wool. He also receives one pair of shoes and is told to keep all such personal items such as handkerchiefs, ties, socks and toilet articles.

"He wants to make a creditable appearance upon arriving home and we share his desire," an official explained.

The soldier next reports to a lecture where he learns details of property disposal, final allotments, pay and transportation. Here, too, he is given information on the problems of going back to civilian life, and is advised to make application for disability claims if entitled to them.

Three films are shown him dur-

DAY OLD BABY'S BODY FOUND IN PUBLIC LOCKER

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 17—Police today sought the mother of a new-born baby boy whose body was found in a public locker at the Greyhound bus terminal here yesterday.

Coroner John B. Gravis said the child was not more than a day or two old. It apparently had been smothered before the body was left in the locker, he said.

The body was wrapped in a new-paper dated Aug. 3, indicating that it may have been in the locker 13 days. A paper sack was the only other thing in the locker.

Police said they were hand-capped in their investigation by the fact that anyone could operate the locker by dropping in a coin which releases the key.

Japan Asks MacArthur
To Stop Reds; Soviet Radio Orders Advances

Japan pleaded with Gen. Douglas MacArthur to halt the Soviet offensive in Manchuria today, but the Soviet radio ordered Red armies to press on and "kill without mercy."

Tokyo's radioed appeal to MacArthur said that a Russian spearhead reached a point west of the Mukden area of southern Manchuria this morning—an indicated advance of perhaps 250 miles from last reported Soviet positions.

The Japanese note did not say how far the Red army was from Mukden, but its wording indicated the city soon would be besieged.
With a pre-war population of 2-880,000 and huge war plants, Mukden is the most important city in Manchuria.

Tokyo contended the continued
Soviet offensive was making Japanese compliance with Emperor Hirohito's cease-fire order difficult, but a Soviet communique last night charged that the Japanese were counter-attacking rather than halting resistance.

Radio Khabarovsk, voice of the Soviet far eastern command, broadcast a new call for Soviet advances some three hours later after Tokyo announced the Japanese note to MacArthur.

"Our offensive is continuing," Khabarovsk said. "Your orders are to advance. Forge ahead until the Japanese imperialists are forced to lay down their arms and surrender into your hand . . ."

"We call on you to avenge the death of your comrades kill without mercy. Make sure the beasts don't get away. Pursue them without respite. Cut off the enemy's ways of retreat save one—into the grave. Make sure he does not get away alive."

Earlier, Marshal Alexander M.
Vasilevsky, commander of Russia's Far Eastern armies, ordered the Japanese Kwantung defenders of Manchuria and Korea to cease all operations, lay down their arms and surrender by noon Moscow time Monday.

Soviet troops in turn will cease military operations after the Jap-

DIVORCEE TAKES
"DUMPLING" TO SCARE MOTHER

DETROIT, Aug. 17 — Alva (Jackie) Reynolds, 30-year-old divorcée, was held without charge today while police investigated her story that she fled to Chicago with the 3-year-old daughter of a serviceman because "the child was neglected and I wanted to scare the mother."

Displaying no remorse, but angered over published accounts of her disappearance with golden-haired Meriam "Dumpling" Watson, Miss Reynolds returned the child to her mother, Mrs. Louella Watson, 25, early today while a nation-wide search for the pair was in progress.

Miss Reynolds disappeared with "Dumpling" Tuesday night at the height of Detroit's victory celebration. She had lived with the Watsons in a two-room apartment since the father, Pvt. Lyndon Watson, entered the Army recently. He is now stationed at Camp Kessler, Miss.

She told police that she and Baby "Dumpling" arrived in Chicago at 7 a. m. Wednesday, registering at the hotel immediately.
She said she took the child out of the room only for meals, and that they boarded a Detroit-bound bus yesterday at 4 p. m., after reading the newspapers.

His tactical switch hastened the actual surrender of a bunch of enemy troops.

Wachtel, flying a midget liaison plane over the Sierra Madre mountains a few weeks ago, discovered an isolated enemy pocket.

Wachtel went back to base and loaded up with every type of explosive that he could carry. He had a tommy gun, hand grenades, and several bazookas. Every day he would fly over the area, shooting as he flew, and the enemy would scurry for cover.

Then when he first learned of the peace terms, Wachtel again headed for the Japanese hideout.
They heard him coming and dived for shelter, but instead of dropping hand grenades he tossed out cigarets and chewing gum.

For the next few days he dropped the same load, with candy added.

Finally, the Japanese quit diving out of sight when they heard the engine of the tiny Maytag marauder. They waved to the plane with strips of white cloth tied to bamboo poles.

A short time later the Japanese officer in command surrendered to American ground troops.

Supreme Allied Commander
Irritated With Tokyo
Delay Requests

Emperor Follows Up Cease
Fire Order With More Powerful Action

MANILA, Aug. 17—Gen. Douglas MacArthur told Japan today to stop stalling and to send surrender emissaries to his headquarters at Manila for surrender terms "without further delay."

The supreme Allied occupation commander, plainly irritated over Japanese bickering, brusquely answered Tokyo's request for clarification of the duties of the Manila mission.

"Your assumption that signing of the surrender terms is not among the tasks of the Japanese representatives to Manila is correct," MacArthur informed general headquarters by radio.

"The directive from this headquarters is clear and explicit and is to be complied with without further delay."

The mission originally was to have flown to Manila today, but MacArthur granted the Japanese more time to complete arrangements for the flight. His initial directives had specified that the mission was only to receive the Allied terms and take them to the emperor, the imperial general headquarters and the government—not to sign them.

Radio Tokyo, meanwhile, revealed that Hirohito had supplemented his cease-fire order with an imperial rescript commanding the Japanese army and navy to lay down their arms in total surrender.

Premier Urges Compliance

Gen. Prince Naruhiko Higashi-Kuni, new Japanese premier and war minister, called on all Army forces to obey the rescript by yielding their arms in "profound sorrow" and returning to peace.

Navy Minister Admiral Masumasa Yonai pledged that the navy would "set the imperial mind at ease by confirming the imperial will."

At the same time, Japanese general headquarters notified Mac-Arthur by radio that members of the emperor's family had left by plane for Manchuria, China and French Indo-China to inform Japanese forces there of Hirohito's cease-fire order.

Trouble In China

Tokyo said Gen. Yasuji Oka-mura, supreme Japanese army commander in China, had notified Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek that his forces had ceased hostilities against China, but still were being attacked in some sectors by Chinese troops.

Okamura said he chose to believe that Chiang had not ordered such "unlawful" Chinese acts and

JAP NAVY CHIEF
'ATONES' FOR FAILURE TO WIN

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 17—
Vice Admiral Takijiro Onishi, chief of the naval general staff, has followed the Japanese war minister in committing hari-kiri to atone for his country's defeat.

The official Japanese Domei agency said today that Onishi killed himself at 3 a. m. yesterday Tokyo time at his official residence after writing this note addressed to Japanese suicide pilots:

"Ever convinced of final victory, you fell gallantly as human bullets. But that conviction finally hasn't been fulfilled. With my death, I aspire to make atonement for all you candidates and members of the bereaved."

Onishi's suicide followed by less than 48 hours that of War Minister Gen. Korechika Anami. Thus both the Japanese army and navy have
"atoned" for their failure to win the war for Emperor Hirohito.

Still another Japanese officer—
Lt. Gen. Kiyomoto Okamoto, Japanese military attaché to Switzerland—committed suicide at Zurich yesterday, but Japan's defeat still has not brought the wave of mass suicide first anticipated.

Chief Executive Plans To Recommend Peacetime Military Training

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17—Congressional sources predicted today that President Truman and congress will have their first major clash over continued drafting of men for the Army.

Mr. Truman has ordered continued induction of 50,000 men a month, compared with the recent rate of 80,000.

Senate and house military affairs committee leaders have expressed a desire to stop inductions immediately. But the President told reporters yesterday that he saw no reason why some of the young men who aren't doing anything right now shouldn't relieve the men at the front so they can return.

Save Ration Books, OPA Tells Users

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17—The Office of Price Administration said today that consumers shouldn't throw away their gasoline ration books and the green stamps in their food ration books.

While no longer needed for buying gasoline, those A, B and C books still will be of help to motorists wanting tires.

A new system of tire rationing, based on occupational driving requirements rather than type of gasoline ration book held by the motorist, has gone into effect.

However, retention of the old gasoline books will expedite the granting of tire purchase certificates since ration boards can use them in determining occupational needs.

War Department Plans 'Helpful Shove' To GIs Released From Service

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17—The War department promised today that every one of the 5,000,000 soldiers scheduled for demobilization within the next year will receive a "helpful shove" in his reorientation back to civilian life.

By the end of this year, American troops will be pouring into 27 separation centers at the rate of 500,000 per month. There they will spend their last 48 hours in the Army.

After the soldier is quartered, the next step is a call to turn in all non-essential equipment. Then he goes to the clothing warehouse where he gets two new complete uniforms, if needed. One is cotton and one wool. He also receives one pair of shoes and is told to keep all such personal items such as handkerchiefs, ties, socks and toilet articles.

"He wants to make a creditable appearance upon arriving home and we share his desire," an official explained.

The soldier next reports to a lecture where he learns details of property disposal, final allotments, pay and transportation. Here, too, he is given information on the problems of going back to civilian life, and is advised to make application for disability claims if entitled to them.

DAY OLD BABY'S BODY FOUND IN PUBLIC LOCKER

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 17—Police today sought the mother of a new-born baby boy whose body was found in a public locker at the Greyhound bus terminal here yesterday.

Coroner John B. Gravis said the child was not more than a day or two old. It apparently had been smothered before the body was left in the locker, he said.

The body was wrapped in a newspaper dated Aug. 3, indicating that it may have been in the locker 13 days. A paper sack was the only other thing in the locker.

Police said they were handicapped in their investigation by the fact that anyone could operate the locker by dropping in a coin which releases the key.

Reorganization Of Foreign Service May Follow Naming Of Acheson

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17—Appointment of Dean G. Acheson to be the new undersecretary of state indicated today that a thorough reorganization of the U. S. foreign service may be in prospect.

Secretary of State James F. Byrnes cast aside a usually followed custom when he selected the 52-year-old Acheson, who is not a career diplomat, to be his No. 1 assistant in the conduct of foreign affairs.

Foreign service officers—career diplomats—look upon the under-secretaryship as the top post for one of their ranks inasmuch as the secretary is a political appointee. Acheson is known to believe that the foreign service needs some drastic reforms as well as a lot of new personnel.

GERMAN SUB IN ARGENTINA TO SURRENDER

BUENOS AIRES, Aug. 17—Another German submarine with 45 officers and men aboard entered Mar Del Plata at 10:45 a. m. today—three months and one week after the Nazi surrender.

The first Nazi submarine to enter Buenos Aires for surrender turned up more than a month ago. The submarine was reported to be similar to the U-530 which gave up here.

The submarine appeared at 9 a. m. about a mile and a half off the coast and an Argentine submarine immediately was dispatched to investigate its presence.

Authorities prevented newsmen from approaching the naval base but promised a statement later.

H. W. Bush Blows Whistle To Mark End Of Two Wars

Harley W. Bush, 61, fireman at Eshelman's mill, has blown the same steam whistle at the end of two wars, and for three great surrenders.

Mr. Bush was employed by the Circleville Milling company at the end of World War I, and blew the whistle then to announce the surrender of der Kaiser's forces.

Later when the milling company became part of the Eshelman company, he continued on as fireman.

Japan Asks MacArthur To Stop Reds; Soviet Radio Orders Advances

Japan pleaded with Gen. Douglas MacArthur to halt the Soviet offensive in Manchuria today, but the Soviet radio ordered Red armies to press on and "kill without mercy."

Tokyo's radioed appeal to MacArthur said that a Russian spearhead reached a point west of the Mukden area of southern Manchuria this morning—an indicated advance of perhaps 250 miles from last reported Soviet positions.

The Japanese note did not say how far the Red army was from Mukden, but its wording indicated the city soon would be besieged. With a pre-war population of 2,880,000 and huge war plants, Mukden is the most important city in Manchuria.

Tokyo contended the continued Soviet offensive was making Japanese compliance with Emperor Hirohito's cease-fire order difficult, but a Soviet communique last night charged that the Japanese were counter-attacking rather than halting resistance.

Radio Khabarovsk, voice of the Soviet far eastern command, broadcast a new call for Soviet advances some three hours later after Tokyo announced the Japanese note to MacArthur.

"Our offensive is continuing," Khabarovsk said. "Your orders are to advance. Forge ahead until the Japanese imperialists are forced to lay down their arms and surrender into your hand . . ."

"We call on you to avenge the death of your comrades kill without mercy. Make sure the beasts don't get away. Pursue them without respite. Cut off the enemy's ways of retreat save one—into the grave. Make sure he does not get away alive."

Earlier, Marshal Alexander M. Vasilevsky, commander of Russia's Far Eastern armies, ordered the Japanese Kwantung defenders of Manchuria and Korea to cease all operations, lay down their arms and surrender by noon Moscow time Monday.

Soviet troops in turn will cease military operations after the Japanese (Continued on Page Two)

DIVORCEE TAKES 'DUMPLING' TO SCARE MOTHER

DETROIT, Aug. 17 — Alva (Jackie) Reynolds, 30-year-old divorcee, was held without charge today while police investigated her story that she fled to Chicago with the 3-year-old daughter of a serviceman because "the child was neglected and I wanted to scare the mother."

Displaying no remorse, but angered over published accounts of her disappearance with golden-haired Meriam "Dumpling" Watson, Miss Reynolds returned the child to her mother, Mrs. Louella Watson, 25, early today while a nationwide search for the pair was in progress.

Miss Reynolds disappeared with "Dumpling" Tuesday night at the height of Detroit's victory celebration. She had lived with the Watsons in a two-room apartment since the father, Pvt. Lyndon Watson, entered the Army recently. He is now stationed at Camp Kessler, Miss.

She told police that she and Baby "Dumpling" arrived in Chicago at 7 a. m. Wednesday, registering at the hotel immediately. She said she took the child out of the room only for meals, and that they boarded a Detroit-bound bus yesterday at 4 p. m., after reading the newspapers.

Wachtel, flying a midget liaison plane over the Sierra Madre mountains a few weeks ago, discovered an isolated enemy pocket.

Wachtel went back to base and loaded up with every type of explosive that he could carry. He had a tommy gun, hand grenades, and several bazookas. Every day he would fly over the area, shooting as he flew, and the enemy would scurry for cover.

Then when he first learned of the peace terms, Wachtel again headed for the Japanese hideout. They heard him coming and dived for shelter, but instead of dropping hand grenades he tossed out cigarettes and chewing gum.

Finally, the Japanese quit diving out of sight when they heard the engine of the tiny Maytag marauder. They waved to the plane with strips of white cloth tied to bamboo poles.

A short time later the Japanese officer in command surrendered to American ground troops.

NIP DELEGATES ORDERED SENT 'WITHOUT DELAY'

Supreme Allied Commander Irritated With Tokyo Delay Requests

RESCRIPT IS ISSUED

Emperor Follows Up Cease Fire Order With More Powerful Action

MANILA, Aug. 17—Gen. Douglas MacArthur told Japan today to stop stalling and to send surrender emissaries to his headquarters at Manila for surrender terms "without further delay."

The supreme Allied occupation commander, plainly irritated over Japanese bickering, brusquely answered Tokyo's request for clarification of the duties of the Manila mission.

"Your assumption that signing of the surrender terms is not among the tasks of the Japanese representatives to Manila is correct," MacArthur informed general headquarters by radio.

"The directive from this headquarters is clear and explicit and is to be complied with without further delay."

The mission originally was to have flown to Manila today, but MacArthur granted the Japanese more time to complete arrangements for the flight. His initial directives had specified that the mission was only to receive the Allied terms and take them to the emperor, the imperial general headquarters and the government—not to sign them.

Radio Tokyo, meanwhile, revealed that Hirohito had supplemented his cease-fire order with an imperial rescript commanding the Japanese army and navy to lay down their arms in total surrender.

Premier Urges Compliance

Gen. Prince Naruhiko Higashikuni, new Japanese premier and war minister, called on all Army forces to obey the rescript by yielding their arms in "profound sorrow" and returning to peace.

Navy Minister Admiral Matsumura Yonai pledged that the navy would "set the imperial mind at ease by confirming the imperial will."

At the same time, Japanese general headquarters notified MacArthur by radio that members of the emperor's family had left by plane for Manchuria, China and French Indo-China to inform Japanese forces there of Hirohito's cease-fire order.

Trouble In China

Tokyo said Gen. Yasuji Okamura, supreme Japanese army commander in China, had notified Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek that his forces had ceased hostilities against China, but still were being attacked in some sectors by Chinese troops.

Okamura said he chose to believe that Chiang had not ordered such "unlawful" Chinese acts and (Continued on Page Two)

JAP NAVY CHIEF 'ATONES' FOR FAILURE TO WIN

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 17—Vice Admiral Takijiro Onishi, chief of the naval general staff, has followed the Japanese war minister in committing hari-kiri to atone for his country's defeat.

The official Japanese Domei agency said today that Onishi killed himself at 3 a. m. yesterday Tokyo time at his official residence after writing this note addressed to Japanese suicide pilots:

"Ever convinced of final victory, you fell gallantly as human bullets. But that conviction finally hasn't been fulfilled. With my death, I aspire to make atonement for all you candidates and members of the bereaved."

Onishi's suicide followed by less than 48 hours that of War Minister Gen. Korechika Anami. Thus both the Japanese army and navy have "atoned" for their failure to win the war for Emperor Hirohito.

Premier Higashi-Kuni said the first task of his new government would be to sign the peace terms and fulfill the requirements of the Potsdam declaration.

Other developments in the fast-breaking Pacific situation included:

- 1.—Japan formally asked MacArthur to halt the Russian offensive in Manchuria on the ground that it was making Japanese compliance with a cease-fire order difficult. Tokyo said the Soviets were approaching a point west of industrially-important Mukden after an indicated advance of 250 miles.
  - 2.—Japan admitted that Japanese planes attacked some 12 Allied transports which approached extremely near the coast of the home island of Shikoku at noon Tokyo time yesterday, but pointed out that the incident occurred four hours before Hirohito had issued his cease-fire order.
  - 3.—The official Japanese Domei news agency said Japan has made arrangements to return the occupied Portuguese half of Timor island northwest of Australia to Portugal.
  - 4.—Tokyo said Vice Admiral Takijiro Onishi, chief of the Japanese naval general staff had committed suicide at his official residence yesterday—the second top-ranking officer in three days to commit hara-kiri after Japan's surrender.
  5. A new Japanese cabinet headed by Prince Naruhiko Higashi-Kuni, a cousin of Hirohito, was sworn in at the Imperial palace.
- MacArthur's call for the immediate departure of a Japanese armistice delegation for Manila was radioed to Tokyo in response to an enemy request for clarification of the exact duties of the envoys.
- Stalling 'Deliberate'
- The supreme occupation commander showed his increasing impatience with what appeared in many respects to be deliberate Japanese stalling and unnecessary requests. The Japanese sent seven such messages in six and one-half hours today.
- MacArthur also was expected to answer Japan's "urgent" request for intervention to halt the Soviet offensive in Manchuria at the earliest possible moment. However, it was pointed out that it now takes Manila about eight hours to communicate with Moscow and the matter may have to be submitted through Washington.
- "This is a very important matter requiring immediate action," a spokesman for MacArthur said.
- At the same time, the spokesman pointed out that Japan herself had notified MacArthur earlier that Hirohito's cease-fire order could not reach troops on the Manchurian fronts for another six days.
- This obviously would make it difficult for the Japanese to claim they had ceased hostilities in Manchuria. A Soviet communique this morning said the Japanese were counter-attacking in Manchuria.
- Party Leaves Today
- The Japanese also admitted in their seventh message to MacArthur—sent at 4 a. m., more than an hour after their request for his intervention with Russia—that members of the Imperial family assigned to notify troops in Manchuria and China of the cease-fire order did not leave Tokyo until 9:30 a. m. today.
- Tokyo said a second Japanese Imperial party also had left Tokyo at 9:30 a. m. bound for southeastern China and French Indo-China to notify troops of Japan's surrender. The flight, originally scheduled for tomorrow, was undertaken immediately "in order to avoid any possible delay due to bad weather."
- The emperor's rescript to Japanese forces to lay down their arms was regarded as another attempt by Japan to end hostilities. A rescript is regarded as the most powerful type of Imperial order.
- The rescript also called on Japanese army and navy forces in all theatres to "maintain solid unity and strict discipline in their movements."
- Red Entry Mentioned
- Whereas the emperor in his original message to the homeland attributed Japan's surrender primarily to the introduction of the atomic bomb, his rescript said:
- "With the Soviet entry into the war and in view of the existing domestic and foreign situation, we used for peace with the four powers in the interests of preserving the national policy and to avoid further needless disasters."
- Japan confessed her air attack on Allied transports off Shikoku in the third of her messages to MacArthur. It said the planes "apparently caused some damage," but explained that the attack occurred four hours before the emperor's cease-fire order was issued.

that part of the Polish frontier adjoining the Baltic sea will pass from a point on Danzig bay eastward to a point north of Braunsberg-Goldap.

The treaty is subject to ratification and comes into force upon exchange of ratification.

Soviet Russia, conforming with its Potsdam statement, relinquished to Poland all claims to German property and other assets and also all claims to shares of German industrial and transportation enterprises throughout Poland, including that part of Germany which passes to Poland.

The Soviet government agreed to concede to Poland from its share of German reparations:

Fifteen per cent of all reparations deliveries from the Soviet zone of occupation.

Fifteen per cent of complete industrial capital equipment received by Russia from the western zones of occupation. Delivery of this equipment to Poland is to be effected in exchange for other goods from Poland.

Fifteen per cent of complete industrial capital equipment which is to be delivered to the Soviet Union from the western zones without payment or compensation in any way. In its turn, Poland agreed to deliver to Russia, beginning in 1946, coal at a special agreed price.

Radio Moscow said 8,000,000 tons of coal would be delivered the first year, 13,000,000 tons each year during the following four years and in subsequent years of the period of occupation of Germany—12,000,000 tons each year.

retary to succeed Joseph C. Grew, resigned, is the first in a number of top-level changes that Byrnes is expected to make in the state department. He is now studying a budget bureau recommendation for reorganization.

One of Byrnes' major objectives is to create some system whereby the various departments and government agencies involved in foreign affairs will have closer and better liaison—especially between the armed services and the state department.

President Truman accepted Grew's resignation late yesterday—two days after Japan's acceptance of the Allied surrender terms. It has been rumored, but without confirmation, that Grew will be appointed political advisor to Gen. Douglas MacArthur in his post as supreme Allied commander in Japan.

Grew was U. S. ambassador to Japan for 10 years prior to Pearl Harbor. Since his repatriation from internment, he had been the state department's expert on far eastern affairs.

In his letter of resignation, Grew, who is 65, stressed his 41 years of public service and his desire to be relieved of government duties. Mr. Truman told a press conference that he had no present plans to appoint a political advisor for MacArthur but that such an office would be created if necessary.

Acheson's appointment was a complete surprise to government officials, diplomatic quarters and to many of his friends. He had expressed many times of late the desire to return to private law practice. As recently as last week high state department officials said that Acheson was leaving government service.

PLANTS TO BE CLEARED SOON

Forces have done an especially outstanding job.

Plant clearance is closely tied in with contract settlement. Frequently, contractors desire government-owned equipment and some of the materials—partly finished or scrap—in their plants when a contract is cancelled. In these cases, the contractors prefer to have such inventories left on their premises. Contract settlements take this in consideration.

In other cases, the contractors may ask the government to move out materials and equipment. If the government fails to do so in 60 days, the contractor may do so at government expense.

The war production board put the finishing touches today to documents revoking almost 360 WPB orders controlling industry. Most of the orders that will be lifted by next week-end involve limitations on production and distribution. Some 40 being retained govern inventories and distribution of tight materials such as tin, rubber, lumber and textiles.

Meanwhile there were other developments bearing on the reconversion situation. This was the picture:

Materials

Army contract cancellations following the Japanese surrender will result in a saving of more than 145,000,000 tons of coal which now will be available for peace-time industry and other civilian purposes.

Lt. Gen. Brehon Somervell, Army service forces chief, said cancellation of Army procurement programs should not only release vast quantities of raw materials, but end freight congestion on American railroads as well.

The Navy instructed its procurement offices throughout the country to free for civilian consumption a large supply of copper, steel and aluminum originally slated for use in war plants with Navy contracts.

The Army's requirements for carbon steel and alloy steel have been slashed 99 per cent within the last few days.

Plants

The Army has offered the Reconstruction Finance Corp. 206 government-owned industrial plants for disposal as surplus. Disposal of 44 others are under consideration. Sixty-nine plants are being retained in operation or on a stand-by basis.

Officials said that since the Japanese surrender the Navy has offered no plants to the RFC for disposal but is making a new study to determine what should be retained and what disposed.

Contract Terminations

Since Japan's surrender, the Army has dispatched 49,000 telegrams cancelling 92,000 contracts. The Army's cancellations, it was estimated, will result in release of between 2,500,000 and 3,000,000 workers.

All directions are south from the North Pole and north from the South Pole. East and west are relative.

PICKAWAY MEN OVER 26 NOT TO BE INDUCTED

Circleville selective service board has received notice from Colonel C. W. Goble, state selective service director, to postpone all orders for induction or preinduction physical examinations for registrants 26 years of age or over, unless such registrants volunteer for military service.

All regularly scheduled inductions and preinduction physical examinations of men under 26 will continue, the clerk said.

Individual counseling service also is available at the centers. The counselors are enlisted men carefully trained to give expert advice on civilian jobs and other problems. Also present for the soldier's convenience are representatives of the veterans administration, civil service commission, U. S. employment commission, American Red Cross and selective service.

After a physical examination, the soldier signs his separation papers and is on the last lap of his Army career. He then has only to receive his final pay, pick up his discharge emblems and railroad ticket and attend a final separation ceremony and he is out of the Army.

The soldier receives only $50 of his final pay in cash, the remainder by check, so there will be less inclination to "fritter it away."

He may wear his uniform for 90 days after being discharged. During this time he is not entitled to travel by train at the special rates accorded servicemen.

warned that his forces might "take action for self-defense."

Premier Higashi-Kuni said the first task of his new government would be to sign the peace terms and fulfill the requirements of the Potsdam declaration.

Other developments in the fast-breaking Pacific situation included:

1.—Japan formally asked MacArthur to halt the Russian offensive in Manchuria on the ground that it was making Japanese compliance with a cease-fire order difficult. Tokyo said the Soviets were approaching a point west of industrially-important Mukden after an indicated advance of 250 miles.

Admit Plane Attack

2.—Japan admitted that Japanese planes attacked some 12 Allied transports which approached extremely near the coast of the home island of Shikoku at noon Tokyo time yesterday, but pointed out that the incident occurred four hours before Hirohito had issued his cease-fire order.

3.—The official Japanese Domei news agency said Japan has made arrangements to return the occupied Portuguese half of Timor island northwest of Australia to Portugal.

4.—Tokyo said Vice Admiral Takijiro Onishi, chief of the Japanese naval general staff had committed suicide at his official residence yesterday—the second top-ranking official in three days to commit hara-kiri after Japan's surrender.

5. A new Japanese cabinet headed by Prince Naruhiko Higashi-Kuni, a cousin of Hirohito, was sworn in at the Imperial palace.

MacArthur's call for the immediate departure of a Japanese armistice delegation for Manila was radioed to Tokyo in response to an enemy request for clarification of the exact duties of the envoys.

Stalling 'Deliberate'

The supreme occupation commander showed his increasing impatience with what appeared in many respects to be deliberate Japanese stalling and unnecessary requests. The Japanese sent seven such messages in six and one-half hours today.

MacArthur also was expected to answer Japan's "urgent" request for intervention to halt the Soviet offensive in Manchuria at the earliest possible moment. However, it was pointed out that it now takes Manila about eight hours to communicate with Moscow and the matter may have to be submitted through Washington.

"This is a very important matter requiring immediate action," a spokesman for MacArthur said. At the same time, the spokesman pointed out that Japan herself had notified MacArthur earlier that Hirohito's cease-fire order could not reach troops on the Manchurian fronts for another six days.

This obviously would make it difficult for the Japanese to claim they had ceased hostilities in Manchuria. A Soviet communiqué this morning said the Japanese were counter-attacking in Manchuria.

Party Leaves Today

The Japanese also admitted in their seventh message to MacArthur—sent at 4 a. m., more than an hour after their request for his intervention with Russia—that members of the imperial family assigned to notify troops in Manchuria and China of the cease-fire order did not leave Tokyo until 9:30 a. m. today.

Tokyo said a second Japanese imperial party also had left Tokyo at 9:30 a. m. bound for southeastern China and French Indo-China to notify troops of Japan's surrender. The flight, originally scheduled for tomorrow, was undertaken immediately "in order to avoid any possible delay due to bad weather."

The emperor's rescript to Japanese forces to lay down their arms was regarded as another attempt by Japan to end hostilities. A rescript is regarded as the most powerful type of imperial order.

The rescript also called on Japanese army and navy forces in all theatres to "maintain solid unity and strict discipline in their movements."

Red Entry Mentioned

Whereas the emperor in his original message to the homeland attributed Japan's surrender primarily to the introduction of the atomic bomb, his rescript said:

"With the Soviet entry into the war and in view of the existing domestic and foreign situation, we sued for peace with the four powers in the interests of preserving the national policy and to avoid further needless disasters."

Japan confessed her air attack on Allied transports off Shikoku in the third of her messages to MacArthur. It said the planes "apparently caused some damage," but explained that the attack occurred four hours before the emperor's cease-fire order was issued.

Petain Exiled

MARSHAL Henri Petain, 89-year-old head of the French government during Nazi occupation, is shown standing in Paris court as he heard the jury return a death verdict with a recommendation of mercy for plotting against the state and collaborating with the enemy. The aged "hero of Verdun" has been flown to St. Marguerite, tiny fortress island in the Mediterranean, where he is likely to spend the rest of his life in exile, in view of the mercy recommendation.

that part of the Polish frontier adjoining the Baltic sea will pass from a point on Danzig bay eastward to a point north of Braunsberg-Goldap.

The treaty is subject to ratification and comes into force upon exchange of ratification.

Soviet Russia, conforming with its Potsdam statement, relinquished to Poland all claims to German property and other assets and also all claims to shares of German industrial and transportation enterprises throughout Poland, including that part of Germany which passes to Poland.

The Soviet government agreed to concede to Poland from its share of German reparations:

Fifteen per cent of all reparations deliveries from the Soviet zone of occupation.

Fifteen per cent of complete industrial capital equipment received by Russia from the western zones of occupation. Delivery of this equipment to Poland is to be effected in exchange for other goods from Poland.

Fifteen per cent of complete industrial capital equipment which is to be delivered to the Soviet Union from the western zones without payment or compensation in any way. In its turn, Poland agreed to deliver to Russia, beginning in 1946, coal at a special agreed price.

Radio Moscow said 8,000,000 tons of coal would be delivered the first year, 13,000,000 tons each year during the following four years and in subsequent years of the period of occupation of Germany—12,000,000 tons each year.

BYRNES BREAKS OFFICE CUSTOM

retire to succeed Joseph C. Grew, resigned, is the first in a number of top-level changes that Byrnes is expected to make in the state department. He is now studying a budget bureau recommendation for reorganization.

One of Byrnes' major objectives is to create some system whereby the various departments and government agencies involved in foreign affairs will have closer and better liaison—especially between the armed services and the state department.

President Truman accepted Grew's resignation late yesterday—two days after Japan's acceptance of the Allied surrender terms. It has been rumored, but without confirmation, that Grew will be appointed political advisor to Gen. Douglas MacArthur in his post as supreme Allied commander in Japan.

Grew was U. S. ambassador to Japan for 10 years prior to Pearl Harbor. Since his repatriation from internment, he had been the state department's expert on far eastern affairs.

In his letter of resignation, Grew, who is 65, stressed his 41 years of public service and his desire to be relieved of government duties. Mr. Truman told a press conference that he had no present plans to appoint a political advisor for MacArthur but that such an office would be created if necessary.

Acheson's appointment was a complete surprise to government officials, diplomatic quarters and to many of his friends. He had expressed many times of late the desire to return to private law practice. As recently as last week high state department officials said that Acheson was leaving government service.

7 MORE COUNTY MEN RELEASED FROM SERVICE

Seven Pickaway county and Circleville servicemen were discharged from different branches of the armed forces during the past ten days, and were issued reclassification cards by the local selective service board.

The seven men were Denver L. Burns, Chillicothe; Ernest D. Lannan, Circleville; Elden D. Crawford, Mt. Sterling; William M. Andrews, Circleville; David E. Walker, Circleville; Lloyd J. Fisher, Circleville; and Francis A. Temple, Circleville.

WILLIAMS IS SENTENCED TO OHIO PENITENTIARY

Ernest Williams, arrested and convicted on a statutory charge in common pleas court, was sentenced to serve from 1 to 10 years in Ohio penitentiary by Common Pleas Judge Emmitt Crist.

Williams was brought to trial August 7, following an accusation from his wife, Mildred, that he had been having intimate relations with three minor daughters. He was acquitted of two of the statutory charges.

WIFE ASKS DIVORCE

Elizabeth P. Combs filed suit in common pleas court for a divorce from Wiley B. Combs, Fouke, Arkansas, charging that the defendant had "a wife living at the time of their marriage." The plaintiff said she and Combs were married July 13, 1944, in Ozark, Dale county, Alabama. She asked the court either to grant her a divorce from Combs or an annulment of their marriage.

DIVORCE SUIT FILED

Fannie Haley filed petition for divorce from George J. Haley in common pleas court Friday. The plaintiff charged gross neglect of duty.

anese begin laying down their arms, Vasilevsky said. The thrust to the western approaches of Mukden apparently was made by Marshal Rodion Y. Malinovsky's trans-Baikal army, which previously had outflanked Mukden some 300 miles to the southwest.

The southern spearhead of the trans-Baikal army was last reported at Changpeh, 450 miles southwest of Mukden and 125 miles from a junction with Chinese communist forces near Peiping.

Another column captured Taonan, 250 miles north of Mukden and 150 miles west of Harbin, yesterday after beating off Japanese counter-attacks.

Marshal K. A. Meretskov's first Far Eastern army advancing on Harbin from the east captured the railway junction of Wangching, 225 miles east of Changteh and 25 miles north of the Korean frontier.

Another first army force beat off a Japanese attempt to recapture the Korean port of Seishin, 140 miles south of Vladivostok.

In northern Manchuria, Gen. Maxim Purkayev's second Far Eastern army seized the river and railway town of Kiamusze, 190 miles northeast of Harbin, with the aid of the Soviet Amur river flotilla after stiff fighting.

SCIOTO RIVER MAY RAISE TO 13 FEET HERE

Pickaway county farmers, who have been praying for rain, Friday were warned there may be water in bottom land in the next few days.

The weather department at Columbus Friday notified Weather Observer Roy Hawkes that the Scioto river may rise to 13 feet at Circleville over the weekend.

The unusual rise was caused by heavy rains above Delaware, it was reported.

The Scioto stood at 5.41 feet Friday morning.

Circleville selective service board has received notice from Colonel C. W. Goble, state selective service director, to postpone all orders for induction or preinduction physical examinations for registrants 26 years of age or over, unless such registrants volunteer for military service.

All regularly scheduled inductions and preinduction physical examinations of men under 26 will continue, the clerk said.

PLANTS TO BE CLEARED SOON

Forces have done an especially outstanding job.

Plant clearance is closely tied in with contract settlement. Frequently, contractors desire government-owned equipment and some of the materials—partly finished or scrap—in their plants when a contract is cancelled. In these cases, the contractors prefer to have such inventories left on their premises. Contract settlements take this in consideration.

In other cases, the contractors may ask the government to move out materials and equipment. If the government fails to do so in 60 days, the contractor may do so at government expense.

The war production board put the finishing touches today to documents revoking almost 360 WPB orders controlling industry. Most of the orders that will be lifted by next week-end involve limitations on production and distribution. Some 40 being retained govern inventories and distribution of tight materials such as tin, rubber, lumber and textiles.

Meanwhile there were other developments bearing on the reconversion situation. This was the picture:

Materials

Army contract cancellations following the Japanese surrender will result in a saving of more than 145,000,000 tons of coal which now will be available for peace-time industry and other civilian purposes. Lt. Gen. Brehon Somervell, Army service forces chief, said cancellation of Army procurement programs should not only release vast quantities of raw materials, but end freight congestion on American railroads as well.

The Navy instructed its procurement offices throughout the country to free for civilian consumption a large supply of copper, steel and aluminum originally slated for use in war plants with Navy contracts.

The Army's requirements for carbon steel and alloy steel have been slashed 99 per cent within the last few days.

Plants

The Army has offered the Reconstruction Finance Corp. 206 government-owned industrial plants for disposal as surplus. Disposal of 44 others are under consideration. Sixty-nine plants are being retained in operation or on a stand-by basis.

Officials said that since the Japanese surrender the Navy has offered no plants to the RFC for disposal but is making a new study to determine what should be retained and what disposed.

Contract Terminations

Since Japan's surrender, the Army has dispatched 49,000 telegrams cancelling 92,000 contracts. The Army's cancellations, it was estimated, will result in release of between 2,500,000 and 3,000,000 workers.

All directions are south from the North Pole and north from the South Pole. East and west are relative.

life insurance and the last on the GI bill of rights.

Individual counseling service also is available at the centers. The counselors are enlisted men carefully trained to give expert advice on civilian jobs and other problems. Also present for the soldier's convenience are representatives of the veterans administration, civil service commission, U. S. employment commission, American Red Cross and selective service.

After a physical examination, the soldier signs his separation papers and is on the last lap of his Army career. He then has only to receive his final pay, pick up his discharge emblems and railroad ticket and attend a final separation ceremony and he is out of the Army.

The soldier receives only $50 of his final pay in cash, the remainder by check, so there will be less inclination to "fritter it away."

He may wear his uniform for 90 days after being discharged. During this time he is not entitled to travel by train at the special rates accorded servicemen.

double-breasted suits appeared definitely slated for an early return. Since Winter clothing already is headed for retail stores, the first peacetime suits probably will be for Spring.

Nylon hosiery production will be getting underway soon, now that military requirements for nylon are down to practically nothing. The trade has agreed, however, not to start selling the long-awaited hose until stocks are sufficient to handle the tremendous pent-up demand.

OPA says don't look for removal of any more rationing controls "for several weeks." Cheese and canned fish are expected to be next off the ration list.

ASHVILLE

V-J union church services held at the Ashville United Brethren church Wednesday evening were well attended. Besides congregational singing and responsive reading, short talks were made by the Rev. Dwight Woodworth, the Rev. O. W. Smith, and the Rev. H. D. Fudge. Pledges to the American and Christian flags led by the Boy and Girl Scouts.

The event marked the end of months of anxious waiting for peace, and many recalled the days when America had held its breath, like the man who, seeing the homes of his neighbors ablaze, wonders anxiously whether his own will be spared. That was the situation in the tense months of 1940. The German Wehrmacht, geared for world conquest, had already ground Austria and Czechoslovakia into submission and was in the process of overrunning Poland, Denmark, Norway, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, Belgium and France. Only a miracle and plenty of "blood, sweat, and tears," had saved England from the same fate. By the end of the year, four-fifths of the world's population was in the conflict.

America, almost unbelieving what it saw and heard, began taking steps for the defense of this hemisphere, putting into effect its first peace-time military conscription, acquiring military bases on British islands, and awarding contracts to private industry for the manufacture of at least ten billions of dollars' worth of military supplies. Then came Pearl Harbor and our entry into wars on all sides of the globe. After many discouragements, the Allies achieved superiority in numbers and equipment and the long "road back" was begun, culminating in V-E and V-J days. Certainly we all join in the fervent wish that this war was truly the war to end wars, and that our boys may never again be called from peaceful pursuits to join in the hopeless futility of war.

Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Martin and family were invited to attend the commissioning ceremonies of the destroyer tender, the U. S. S. Shenandoah at the Todd Shipyards at Tacoma, Washington, August 13 by Capt. A. C. Burroughs, prospective commanding officer of the ship. Ens. William Martin, of Ashville, will be a member of the crew.

The annual Lutheran Brotherhood picnic, postponed Wednesday because of V-J day services, was held Thursday evening in Community Park. Many of the members and their families were present to enjoy plenty of fried chicken, roasted sweet corn, ice cream, and all the usual picnic trimmings.

U. S. S. SPECTACLE BACK IN PORT TO BE REPAIRED

PUGET SOUND NAVY YARD, BREMERTON, WASH., Aug. 17—Her deck and bulkhead plates jagged and torn from the hit of a Jap suicide plane off Okinawa in May, the gallant little minesweeper U. S. S. Spectacle returned to her home port here today for repairs. Skipped by Lt. Gordon B. Williams, USNR, Greenville, N. C., the tough little craft lost 29 men when the Kamikaze smashed into her hull, starting fires that seared her decks, wiring and bulkheads.

But on her bridge scoreboard the Spectacle bore proof that she packed a punch, her official ton of four Jap suicide boats, credited tally including destructible small enemy surface craft, one bomber and one fighter plane, this in addition to her minesweeping duties.

Commissioned here in August, 1944, the Spectacle saw action close ashore at Iwo Jima, prior to the invasion of Okinawa.

FRISCO CROWDS TURN VANDALS IN CELEBRATION

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 17—For the first time in three days San Francisco's downtown area was quiet — even compared with wartime — after riot squads of 3,200 police and shore patrolmen quelled a mob of sailors and civilians who were turning victory celebration into an orgy of "pure vandalism."

Chief of Police Charles Dullea proclaimed a three-hour state of emergency "in the name of the people of the State of California."

Policemen, whose good nature had remained unimpaired through two nights of hilarious victory celebrations, brusquely ordered civilians and sailors alike off downtown streets. Dullea said the mob, estimated at a fraction of the boisterous crowds of the past two days, broken "every window within three blocks."

Looting unequalled during the earlier stages of the victory demonstration was reported by irate Market-street merchants.

"Fun's fun, but this is pure vandalism," one of them said.

Both men and women civilian clothes seemed to be the chief target of the looters.

$14,000,000,000 VICTORY BOND DRIVE PLANNED

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17—The treasury was making plans today for a gigantic "victory" bond drive to help meet huge costs of demobilization, contract cancellation and other expenses incident to the war.

Secretary of the Treasury Fred M. Vinson called all state war finance leaders to a meeting here Saturday to plan a drive for raising from $10,000,000,000 to $14,000,000,000.

The end of the war has not ended the governments large war-bond expenditures, Vinson said. There are millions of men overseas and billions of dollars will be needed to bring them home. Money is also needed to meet mustering-out pay, costs of caring for the disabled and for other expenses of the war, he said.

"I believe the victory loan should be scheduled for the earliest possible date," Vinson said. "It should provide a fitting climax for the series of successful drives by which we at home have financed the war."

He said the victory drive should be the last organized effort to sell bonds but that sales of savings bonds, especially under the payroll deduction plan, should continue.

U. S. S. SPECTACLE BACK IN PORT TO BE REPAIRED

PUGET SOUND NAVY YARD, BREMERTON, WASH., Aug. 17—Her deck and bulkhead plates jagged and torn from the hit of a Jap suicide plane off Okinawa in May, the gallant little minesweeper U. S. S. Spectacle returned to her home port here today for repairs. Skipped by Lt. Gordon B. Williams, USNR, Greenville, N. C., the tough little craft lost 29 men when the kamikaze smashed into her hull, starting fires that seared her decks, wiring and bulkheads.

But on her bridge scoreboard the Spectacle bore proof that she packed a punch, her official ton of four Jap suicide boats, credited tally including destructive small enemy surface craft, one bomber and one fighter plane; this in addition to her minesweeping duties. Commissioned here in August, 1944, the Spectacle saw action close ashore at Iwo Jima, prior to the invasion of Okinawa.

FRISCO CROWDS TURN VANDALS IN CELEBRATION

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 17—For the first time in three days San Francisco's downtown area was quiet — even compared with wartime — after riot squads of 3,200 police and shore patrolmen quelled a mob of sailors and civilians who were turning victory celebration into an orgy of "pure vandalism."

Chief of Police Charles Dullia proclaimed a three-hour state of emergency "in the name of the people of the State of California." Policemen, whose good nature had remained unshaken through two nights of hilarious victory celebrations, brusquely ordered civilians and sailors alike off downtown streets. Dullia said the mob, estimated at a fraction of the boisterous crowds of the past two days, broken "every window within three blocks."

Looting unequalled during the earlier stages of the victory demonstration was reported by irate Market-street merchants.

"Fun's fun, but this is pure vandalism," one of them said. Both men and women civilian clothes seemed to be the chief target of the looters.

$14,000,000,000 VICTORY BOND DRIVE PLANNED

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17—The treasury was making plans today for a gigantic "victory" bond drive to help meet huge costs of demobilization, contract cancellation and other expenses incident to the war.

Secretary of the Treasury Fred M. Vinson called all state war finance leaders to a meeting here Saturday to plan a drive for raising from $10,000,000,000 to $14,000,000,000.

The end of the war has not ended the governments large war-born expenditures, Vinson said. There are millions of men overseas and billions of dollars will be needed to bring them home. Money is also needed to meet mustering-out pay, costs of caring for the disabled and for other expenses of the war, he said.

"I believe the victory loan should be scheduled for the earliest possible date," Vinson said. "It should provide a fitting climax for the series of successful drives by which we at home have financed the war."

He said the victory drive should be the last organized effort to sell bonds but that sales of savings bonds, especially under the payroll deduction plan, should continue.

WIND VS. ATOMS

THE Japanese people have had faith in something which they called the "divine wind," which seems to be a sort of inspired courage. For a little while it served them in good stead, but there were limits to its power.

Then along came a magical weapon which took all the wind out of the Japs sails. It was called atomic power, and composed of particles so small that in their pure form they were invisible to the human eye. But they are so powerful that one little pellet, stepped down for safe handling and small enough to be carried in the palm of a man's hand, could devastate a whole landscape and kill every living creature in it.

That is a wonderful contribution to the safety of our civilized world—for the time being. We believe now that we can weather out this recent storm and provide strong defenses, and thus keep our civilization going. But we are not so confident as we were before these marvels developed. In the minds of thinking people there rests a fear that was not there before.

How can that fear, and the facts back of it, be overcome? How can intelligent men and women feel secure and happy again? Some will say that perhaps the only way to save this and succeeding generations from destruction is a strong wave of religious faith and morality.

THE GREATEST FORCE

WHEN King Solomon in his disillusioned old age said there was "nothing new under the sun," he was wrong. And President Truman, in his notable address the other evening, called the turn on him. The President was speaking of the power of this nation and where it comes from. The immense power of the atom, newly revealed and explained, was in his mind, but he was not speaking of that. The real power of the free world headed by America, he said, is something new.

"The new thing, the thing we had not known, the thing we have learned now and should never forget, is this: that a society of self-governing men is more powerful, more enduring, more creative, than any other kind of society, however disciplined, however centralized. We know now that the basic proposition of the worth and dignity of man is not a sentimental aspiration or a vain hope or a piece of rhetoric. It is the strongest, the most creative force now present in the world."

It is the truth, newly and vividly expressed; and doubtless George Washington, Thomas Jefferson and Abraham Lincoln would agree with him.

In fairness and for the sake of the record, be it not forgotten who laid the ground for the discovery of the atomic bomb and for Russia's entry into the war. F. D. R.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, August 17—Behind the whole tricky dealing of the Japanese to obtain a preferred position for their emperor lay rather convincing evidence of the plot to perpetuate—beyond our western understanding—the Japanese system, which brought on Pearl Harbor.

In fact, the simplest and most easily obtainable facts added verification to certain high congressional suspicions that maintenance of the emperor in any position could well give the Japs a better nucleus upon which to build future world trouble than the Nazis were able to get.

The Truman administration quieted these increasing congressional doubts by passing along the inside word that Truman looked upon any satisfactory surrender as, in eventual fact, unconditional—apparently regardless of the standing of the emperor, as long as we held control.

To the Japs, however, the emperor is the top god in a list reputed to run to about 500, no matter where he sits, even if under Mr. Truman's chair.

Their established religious theory would naturally hold that their god was in temporary difficulties in any subservient position. The national Jap problem then would be to extricate him, and restore him to his rightful position. Anyone standing in the way, like Mr. Truman or an American doughboy, would be a sort of devil who had kidnapped God.

The whole superstition could be proved a fake and delusion to the Japanese if respect for reason could be restored there, by a factual research into accurate history of their deified dynasty—research by their own people. Japanese intellectuals who long since discovered that the line back to the sun goddess was not only broken but shattered by many historical incidents, have been shushed effectively by the emperor's clan, meaning the ruling classes, who may change faces from time to time but never have changed their emperor story, which was the excuse for their authority and existence.

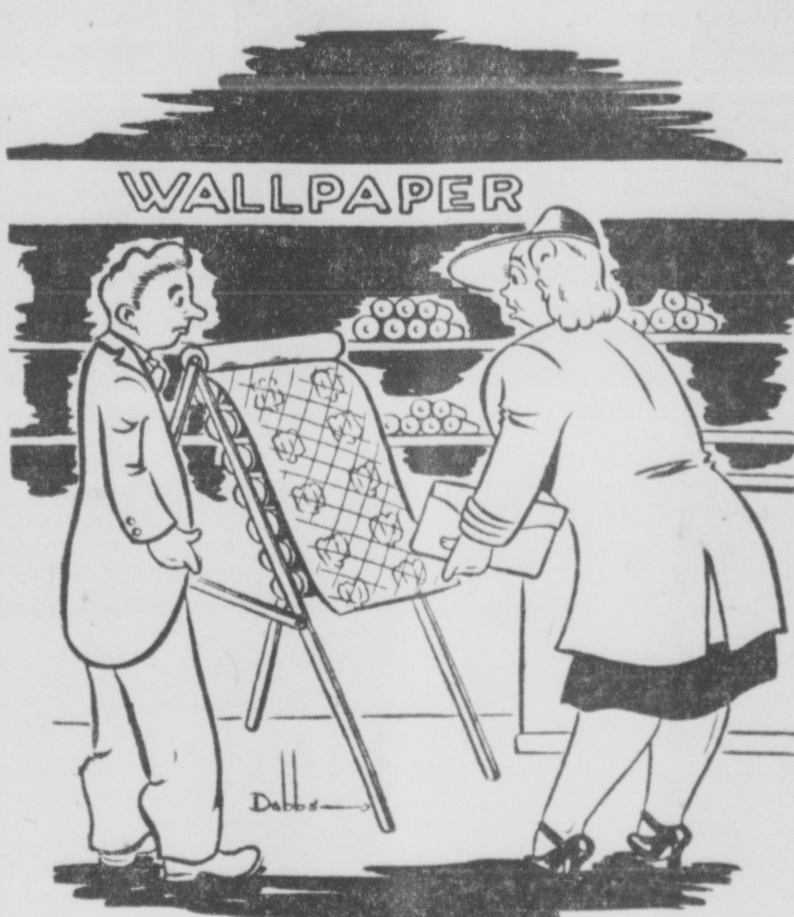

Their trumpery, in turn, would be just as easy to prove and display. The Japanese people have been required to believe, as a co-matter of religion and government, that the emperor picked his cabinets, controlled the diet and held "complete executive and legislative powers." This pretense that he was a Hitler was difficult to maintain with a straight face at times, as the various ruling Japanese groups controlled and pushed god first one way, then another—in fact, wherever they wanted him.

The establishment of reason in Japanese will, however, be the most difficult task because reason never existed there. As part of its emperor government religion, Shintoism has no moral or ethical code. The emperor, for instance, is not required to do what is right or good, because he is a god. The faith of Shintoism ignores both logic and reason, and the people are supposed to be led by blind instinct.

While the militarists built the emperor god theory up out of ancient legends to its highest peak, conflicting organized beliefs have gained footholds there—including the Christian concepts of reason, right and wrong. A census before the war showed 2,104 Christian churches, 106,000 Buddhist temples and 110,431 Shinto shrines. There is no communism in Japan above ground. The foothold of Christianity, therefore, is quite clearly the one upon which we should build.

Complications of Measles

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

MEASLES is a disease which probably is due to a virus, that is a germ so small that it can pass through openings of a porcelain filter. Measles is passed from one person to another by direct contact. These droplets, thrown into the air during talking or sneezing by a person who has measles, are breathed in by a well person who contracts the disease if he is susceptible to it. The virus which causes the disease remains alive only for a short time after leaving the body.

Measles, contrary to general opinion, is a serious disorder. In the United States each year some 10,000 people, mostly children, succumb to it. With proper care, practically all of these deaths could have been prevented and the complications of the disease avoided. Poor nutrition and bad housing are probably contributing factors in the deaths.

Dangerous To Children

Measles is particularly dangerous for children under three and in those youngsters whose nutrition has suffered because of some prolonged illness or other cause. A second attack of measles is rare, since one attack generally produces protection for life. Very few infants under six months of age have the disease because of the immunity or protection which they get from the mother. This protection lasts only up to the age of six months and after that time is rapidly lost. However, if the mother has not had measles, the infant is not, as a rule, born with this immunity.

Regular Epidemics

Measles epidemics seem to occur regularly. In larger cities, the epidemics seem to occur more frequently than in the smaller ones. Measles is also probably the most catching of all the communicable diseases. Nearly all persons who have not developed immunity by having had the disease are susceptible to it. Measles is a disease to be particularly feared during the period of the year when colds, influenza and pneumonia are occurring.

Measles starts with fever, running and redness of the eyes, sneezing, coughing and then the development of a rash made up of red spots.

Now, we have several protective measures to be employed for those in whom the disease may be particularly dangerous, that is, children under three years of age and others who may be weak and sickly. These consist in the injection of convalescent serum, immune globulin or placental extract.

Convalescent serum is blood serum taken from a person who has recently recovered from the disease. Immune globulin is made from the protein part of the blood and placental extract comes from the afterbirth. The physician will decide in each case which of these substances should be employed. As a general rule, the convalescent serum seems most effective.

For Friday, August 17

A CLEVER and timely stroke of genius in a moment of a strange or spectacular crisis might turn the tide away from sudden danger, perhaps accident or other form of catastrophe. Clever or expert handling of such danger may be dramatic or thrilling. The public seems involved, but in all, be reasonable and tactful as well, not carried away by excitement or emotions. Be particularly careful in travel or storms, and sidestep conflicts or physical dangers. Some gratification or happiness may be attained by heeding ideals or altruistic urges.

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for a year of unusual, exciting, dramatic, possibly spectacular or sensational events or experiences. A sudden danger, accident, storm, fire, explosion, might incite an heroic or dramatic coup,

CHAPTER TWENTY-TWO

The leading local missionary society was holding its May meeting in the home of Mrs. Azubah Fitch. Thirty or more women were ranged around the long living room, where portraits of ancestors hung thick on the walls, and the furniture radiated auras of past generations.

Mrs. Azubah Fitch was a tall woman, strong of bone, with an almost Indian profile. Charitable and churchy, she had her finger in almost every philanthropic effort in the community. She stalked about the room as majestically as a sister of Caesar. She paused before a knot of women with their heads together. "What is it?—what is it?" she boomed. "Something I can't hear?"

"Just a little gossip, Mrs. Fitch, that, if it's true, touches us all," explained Mrs. Nocot.

"She gave them a heavy glance. 'I'm, it's probably not true; but—what is it?'"

"Well, it comes from our plumber, answered Sarah George. 'From Sam Buttles—we've always had his firm. Well, Sam said he had been called up to the old Wolfe place a couple of weeks ago to fix a water pipe in the basement.'"

"Wolfe," mused Mrs. Fitch. "Cyrus Wolfe married my third cousin, Rhoda Freese. That's the picture of her grandmother over the bookcase." She sat down in a vacant chair, prepared to listen.

"And Sam said that when he was hunting for the water shut-off, he noticed a door with a padlock on it. And the house man said, 'It's not in there' rather sharply. It made him wonder what was in there, so after he fixed the leak, he passed that door again and saw that the padlock wasn't closed. So he just looked in." She paused dramatically.

"Go on—go on!" prodded Mrs. Fitch. "Liquor I suppose."

"No—it was dozens and dozens of tires—hoarders!"

Lovina Cobb—a sharp-faced, will-forded brunette in her early forties—said to the room at large, "I think such things should be known, it's a protection to us all. Rachel Folsom told me yesterday, and her husband, Fred—you know he teaches in the high school—Fred had it straight from the man. . . . It seems that there has been short-waving in code going on all spring around November Mountain, and only the Lawrences and this new Mr. and Mrs. Jones live up that way."

Their hostess spoke with ominous disapproval. "Old Mr. Lawrence belongs to our society. She was sick today and couldn't come."

"Oh, I didn't mean them—goodness no!—it's these new people we've been talking about. The man said that they chased the short-waving car right up to the Wolfe place, then lost it; and he as good as admitted that Jones was being watched by the police." "Jones"—millions of Jones—an alias, likely, gloomed Mrs. Fitch. "So he's a Fifth Columnist, is he? Living right in my cousin's house. . . . She would turn over in her grave!"

Mrs. Avery Parmer, from the other end of the room, tinkled like a glass bell. "We're told to beware of rumors. I think it's terrible for such things to get about when people may be innocent."

Mrs. Parmer quailed a little before the general stare, but she went ahead bravely. "No, don't trust rumor. Mrs. Rainey's husband knows Mr. Jones very well through the bank, and he says that Jones has an excellent reputation."

They broke up into a dozen chatting groups, each woman eager to have her say until five o'clock came and the time of departure.

Major George Tyrell, World War veteran, was bicycling to his law office in the Hepatong Building. He coasted down the long hill to Main Street, limping a little. Twenty-five years ago shrapnel had torn his right leg; it still ached in damp weather, and this morning was paining rather fiercely. At the top of the hill, he leaned the wheel against a tree before like Bernese neustand and soft drinks store. His sad remote eyes looked relieved as he scanned the headlines of the morning paper.

The Major went inside to pay Ike, who was at the cigar counter. "How are things coming?" asked the old soldier.

Ike's round face brightened. "Fine—fine! We get out three times a week to drill."

The Major sighed. "I wish I could take a more active part."

"I lost fifteen pounds snakin' through the grass to throw grenades—dummies, of course; and I crawl a couple hundred feet before the 'nemy' saw me."

"Good work," the Major boomed, opening the door. "I'll see you Wednesday night—'Bye!'"

"Wait, just a minute!" Ike came around the counter to him. "Say, didya hear there was short-wavin' in code goin' on near Hickory?"

The Major's expression did not change. "Lots of rumors these days. We check them all."

After he had departed, Ike carried out bundles of papers and disposed them on the rack. "Swell guy, the Major! And he knew about that short-wavin' all right, all right! His poker face told the story."

A hollow clomp-clomp of a horse's hoofs on one of the small bridges of State Forest Reservation; then "Spunk!" Adams, superintendent, dismounted to examine a rotting plank in the bridge floor; he resolved to fix a board that afternoon and fix it. Short of help in keeping up the five thousand acres, he made many small repairs himself.

He would hate to leave all this, but he would soon be off to Buffalo to become a physical recreation director for a large war plant.

Dismally "Spunk!" counted another loss. Cave-hunting was his hobby, and he belonged to the New England Speleological Association, the members of which are commonly called "spelunkers." His enthusiasm for caves had gained him his nickname. There were many caves in this vicinity, and he had not seen them all.

His healthy appetite reminded him that it was nearing noon, so he turned his horse toward home, a sturdy building of creosoted logs at the foot of the mountain. His hard, chunky body slipped easily off his horse near the stable. Coming around to the side, he saw a car in front and heard his wife, Kathy, talking to someone on the front steps. He beamed when he saw that it was Eleonore Lawrence. They shook hands cordially.

Kathy rose and said that she would get bread and milk for the two children, and cheese and sardines for them; Eleonore must eat a bite with them for who knew when there would be another opportunity? "Leaving town?" asked Eleonore. How soon did they expect to leave?

Two weeks or less. "Spunk!" then asked, "And now with you—what's cooking?"

"An interest in caves." "Is that a fact? What'd you mean—want to go in one?" He was suddenly radiant. "What cave do you plan to explore?"

"Tories!" He shook his head. That wasn't the best one, by far. "Have you been in Tories?" she inquired.

"Long ago. It's called Robbers' Roost, too; for in the fifties, some fellows hid there before robbing the Sweetburg Bank."

What a coincidence, thought Eleonore. She asked, "What's it like inside?"

"It has three big chambers, if I remember rightly. Flint overlapping, no fretting, no carving, no stalactites—just a dumb ordinary cave."

"Are there bats?" "Uh-huh; but they don't get in your hair. That's a fallacy." He spoke again after a minute's consideration. "See here, if you plan to go soon—I might be able to go with you."

Eleonore murmured "Thanks, Spunk!" but did not set a time for the expedition.

Kathy appeared just then with luncheon which they enjoyed, sitting on the steps and chatting.

Yes, they had heard from Art and they felt that the message came from Hawaii. He was engaged to Mercedes Lake, the girl with him at the country club party. And Eben was coming home from camp this weekend, the first time since the dance. . . . Eleonore really must fly now. Gran's medicine! She would call them and have them come to dinner before they left town.

She had waved goodbye and was shifting gears, when "Spunk!" called, "Hi—wait a minute!" She stopped in a few yards. When he came up to the window, he said "Just another little tip on caves—never go in alone."

She smiled brilliantly. "Thanks a lot. See you soon."

"TO BE OR NOT TO BE"

HAMLET, IN his notorious soliloquy, had nothing on the poor bridge player with his problem of "to cover or not to cover" when an opposing honor is face-up on the table. Usually a sound guide is the presence in your own hand of some lower honor or high spot card which might become a winner if you cover the instant honor, or the likelihood of such a secondary honor in your partner's hand. Lacking one or the other of these factors, you are usually better off to refrain from easing the declarer's path by covering.

"always cover an honor with an honor." That said South's only problem for him. He came up with the dummy's A, club discards—risky tactics—and then tried the obligatory club finesse.

When that worked, he scored the club A, ruffed the club J with the heart 9, ruffed a diamond, dropped the heart Q with the K and ran the rest of his hearts.

If West had not covered the heart Q, South would have had a problem of finessing or trying to drop the Q in two rounds. If West had refrained from doubling and covering the honor, it is certain South, with nine trumps on his side, would have tried to drop the Q and would have been set. In fact, no matter what South then did, he would have been set.

WIND VS. ATOMS

THE Japanese people have had faith in something which they called the "divine wind," which seems to be a sort of inspired courage. For a little while it served them in good stead, but there were limits to its power.

Then along came a magical weapon which took all the wind out of the Japs sails. It was called atomic power, and composed of particles so small that in their pure form they were invisible to the human eye. But they are so powerful that one little pellet, stepped down for safe handling and small enough to be carried in the palm of a man's hand, could devastate a whole landscape and kill every living creature in it.

That is a wonderful contribution to the safety of our civilized world—for the time being. We believe now that we can weather out this recent storm and provide strong defenses, and thus keep our civilization going. But we are not so confident as we were before these marvels developed. In the minds of thinking people there rests a fear that was not there before.

How can that fear, and the facts back of it, be overcome? How can intelligent men and women feel secure and happy again? Some will say that perhaps the only way to save this and succeeding generations from destruction is a strong wave of religious faith and morality.

THE GREATEST FORCE

WHEN King Solomon in his disillusioned old age said there was "nothing new under the sun," he was wrong. And President Truman, in his notable address the other evening, called the turn on him. The President was speaking of the power of this nation and where it comes from. The immense power of the atom, newly revealed and explained, was in his mind, but he was not speaking of that. The real power of the free world headed by America, he said, is something new.

"The new thing, the thing we had not known, the thing we have learned now and should never forget, is this: that a society of self-governing men is more powerful, more enduring, more creative, than any other kind of society, however disciplined, however centralized. We know now that the basic proposition of the worth and dignity of man is not a sentimental aspiration or a vain hope or a piece of rhetoric. It is the strongest, the most creative force now present in the world."

It is the truth, newly and vividly expressed; and doubtless George Washington, Thomas Jefferson and Abraham Lincoln would agree with him.

In fairness and for the sake of the record, be it not forgotten who laid the ground for the discovery of the atomic bomb and for Russia's entry into the war. F. D. R.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, August 17—Behind the whole tricky dealing of the Japanese to obtain a preferred position to their emperor lay rather convincing evidence of the plot to perpetuate—beyond our western understanding—the Japanese system, which brought on Pearl Harbor.

In fact, the simplest and most easily obtainable facts added verification to certain high congressional suspicions that maintenance of the emperor in any position could well give the Japs a better nucleus upon which to build future world trouble than the Nazis were able to get.

The Truman administration quieted these increasing congressional doubts by passing along the inside word that Truman looked upon any satisfactory surrender as, in eventual fact, unconditional—apparently regardless of the standing of the emperor, as long as we held control.

To the Japs, however, the emperor is the top god in a list reputed to run to about 500, no matter where he sits, even if under Mr. Truman's chair.

Their established religious theory would naturally hold that their god was in temporary difficulties in any subservient position. The national Jap problem then would be to extricate him, and restore him to his rightful position. Anyone standing in the way, like Mr. Truman or an American doughboy, would be a sort of devil who had kidnaped God.

The whole superstition could be proved a fake and delusion to the Japanese if respect for reason could be restored there, by a factual research into accurate history of their deified dynasty—research by their own people. Japanese intellectuals who long since discovered that the line back to the sun goddess was not only broken but shattered by many historical incidents, have been shushed effectively by the emperor's clan, meaning the ruling classes, who may change faces from time to time but never have changed their emperor story, which was the excuse for their authority and existence.

Their trumpety, in turn, would be just as easy to prove and display. The Japanese people have been required to believe, as a co-matter of religion and government, that the emperor picked his cabinets, controlled the diet and held "complete executive and legislative powers." This pretense that he was a Hitler was difficult to maintain with a straight face at times, as the various ruling Japanese groups controlled and pushed god first one way, then another—in fact, wherever they wanted him.

The establishment of reason in Japanese will, however, be the most difficult task because reason never existed there. As part of its emperor government religion, Shintoism has no moral or ethical code. The emperor, for instance, is not required to do what is right or good, because he is a god. The faith of Shintoism ignores both logic and reason, and the people are supposed to be led by blind instinct.

While the militarists built the emperor god theory up out of ancient legends to its highest peak, conflicting organized beliefs have gained footholds there—including the Christian concepts of reason, right and wrong. A census before the war showed 2,104 Christian churches, 106,000 Buddhist temples and 110,431 Shinto shrines. There is no communism in Japan above ground. The foothold of Christianity, therefore, is quite clearly the one upon which we should build.

Complications of Measles

By HERMAN N. RUNDESEN, M.D.

MEASLES is a disease which probably is due to a virus, that is a germ so small that it can pass through openings of a porcelain filter. Measles is passed from one person to another by direct droplet contact. These droplets, thrown into the air during talking or sneezing by a person who has measles, are breathed in by a well person who contracts the disease if he is susceptible to it. The virus which causes the disease remains alive only for a short time after leaving the body.

Measles, contrary to general opinion, is a serious disorder. In the United States each year some 10,000 people, mostly children, succumb to it. With proper care, practically all of these deaths could have been prevented and the complications of the disease avoided. Poor nutrition and bad housing are probably contributing factors in the deaths.

Dangerous to Children

Measles is particularly dangerous for children under three and in those youngsters whose nutrition has suffered because of some prolonged illness or other cause. A second attack of measles is rare, since one attack generally produces protection for life. Very few infants under six months of age have the disease because of the immunity or protection which they get from the mother. This protection lasts only up to the age of six months and after that time is rapidly lost. However, if the mother has not had measles, the infant is not, as a rule, born with this immunity.

Regular Epidemics

Measles epidemics seem to occur regularly. In larger cities, the epidemics seem to occur more frequently than in the smaller ones. Measles is also probably the most catching of all the communicable diseases. Nearly all persons who have not developed immunity by having had the disease are susceptible to it. Measles is a disease to be particularly feared during the period of the year when colds, influenza and pneumonia are occurring.

Measles starts with fever, running and redness of the eyes, sneezing, coughing and then the development of a rash made up of red spots.

Now, we have several protective measures to be employed for those in whom the disease may be particularly dangerous, that is, children under three years of age and others who may be weak and sickly. These consist in the injection of convalescent serum, immune globulin or placental extract.

Convalescent serum is blood serum taken from a person who has recently recovered from the disease. Immune globulin is made from the protein part of the blood and placental extract comes from the afterbirth. The physician will decide in each case which of these substances should be employed. As a general rule, the convalescent serum seems most effective.

STARS SAY—

For Friday, August 17

A CLEVER and timely stroke of genius in a moment of a strange or spectacular crisis might turn the tide away from sudden danger, perhaps accident or other form of catastrophe. Clever or expert handling of such danger may be dramatic or thrilling. The public seems involved, but in all, be reasonable and tactful as well, not carried away by excitement or emotions. Be particularly careful in travel or storms, and sidestep conflicts or physical dangers. Some gratification or happiness may be attained by heeding ideals or altruistic urges.

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for a year of unusual, exciting, dramatic, possibly spectacular or sensational events or experiences. A sudden danger, accident, storm, fire, explosion, might incite an heroic or dramatic coup.

CHAPTER TWENTY-TWO

The leading local missionary society was holding its May meeting in the home of Mrs. Azubah Fitch. Thirty or more women were ranged around the long living room, where portraits of ancestors hung thick on the walls, and the furniture radiated auras of past generations.

Mrs. Azubah Fitch was a tall woman, strong of bone, with an almost Indian profile. Charitable and churchly, she had her finger in almost every philanthropic effort in the community. She stalked about the room as majestically as a sister of Caesar. She paused before a knot of women with her head together. "What is it?—what is it?" she boomed. "Something I can't hear?"

"Just a little gossip, Mrs. Fitch, that, if it's true, touches us all," explained Mrs. Noot.

She gave them a heavy glance. "H'm, it's probably not true; but—what is it?"

"Well, it comes from our plumber," answered Sarah George. "From Sam Buttles—we've always had his firm. Well, Sam said he had been called up to the old Wolfe place a couple of weeks ago to fix a water pipe in the basement."

"Wolfe," mused Mrs. Fitch. "Cyrus Wolfe married my third cousin, Rhoda Freese. That's the picture of her grandmother over the bookcase." She sat down in a vacant chair, prepared to listen.

"And Sam said that when he was hunting for the water shut-off, he noticed a door with a padlock on it. And the house man said, 'It's not in there' rather sharply. It made him wonder what was in there, so after he fixed the leak, he passed that door again and saw that the padlock wasn't closed. So he just looked in." She paused dramatically.

"No—it was dozens and dozens of times—hardly!"

Lovina Cobb—a sharp-faced, willow-bodied brunette in her early forties—said to the room at large, "I think such things should be known, it's a protection to us all. Rachel Folsom told me yesterday, and her husband, Fred—you know he teaches in the high school—Fred had it straight from the man. . . . It seems that there has been short-waving in code going on all spring around November Mountain, and only the Lawrences and this new Mr. and Mrs. Jones live up that way."

Their hostess spoke with ominous disapproval. "Old Mrs. Lawrence belongs to our society. She was sick today and couldn't come."

"Oh, I didn't mean them—goodness no!—it's these new people we've been talking about. The man said that they chased the short-waving car right up to the Wolfe place, then lost it; and he as good as admitted that Jones was being watched by the police!"

"Jones—millions of Jones—no, an alias, likely," gloomed Mrs. Fitch. "So he's a Fifth Columnist, is he? Living right in my cousin's house. . . . She would turn over in her grave!"

Mrs. Avery Parmer, from the other end of the room, tinkled like a glass bell. "We're told to beware of rumors, I think it's terrible for such things to get about when people may be innocent."

Mrs. Parmer quailed a little before the general stare, but she went ahead bravely. "No, don't trust rumors. Mrs. Rainey's husband knows Mr. Jones very well through the bank, and he says that Jones has an excellent reputation."

They broke up into a dozen chatting groups, each woman eager to have her say until five o'clock came and the time of departure.

Major George Tyrrell, World War veteran, was bicycling to his law office in the Hepatong Building. He coasted down the long hill to Main Street and walked up the next grade, limping a little. Twenty-five years ago shrapnel had torn his right leg; it still ached in damp weather, and this morning was paining rather fiercely. At the top of the hill, he leaned the wheel against a tree before like Bernstein's newstand and soft drinks store. His sad remote eyes looked relieved as he scanned the headlines of the morning paper.

The Major went inside to pay Ike, who was at the cigar counter. "How are things coming?" asked the old soldier.

Ike's round face brightened. "Fine—fine! We get out three times a week to drill."

The Major sighed. "I wish I could take a more active part."

Ike patted his middle-aged belt line. "I lost fifteen pounds snakin' through the grass to throw grenades dummies, of course; and I crawl a couple hundred feet before the 'nemy' saw me."

"Good work," the Major boomed, opening the door. "I'll see you Wednesday night—Bye!"

"Wait, just a minute!" Ike came around the counter to him. "Say, didya hear there was short-wavin' in code goin' on near Hickory?"

After he had departed, Ike carried out bundles of papers and disposed them on the rack. "Swell guy, the Major! And he knew about that short-wavin' all right, all right! His poker face told the story."

A hollow clomp-clomp of a horse's hoofs on one of the small bridges in State Forest Reservation; then "Spellunk" Adams, superintendent, dismounted to examine a rotting plank in the bridge floor; he resolved to bring a board that afternoon and fix it. Short of help in keeping up the five thousand acres, he made many small repairs himself.

He would hate to leave all this, but he would soon be off to Buffalo to become a physical recreation director for a large war plant.

Dimly "Spellunk" counted another loss. Cave-hunting was his hobby, and he belonged to the New England Speleological Association, the members of which are commonly called "spellunkers." His enthusiasm for caves had gained him his nickname. There were many caves in his vicinity, and he had not seen them all.

His healthy appetite reminded him that it was nearing noon, so he turned his horse toward home, a sturdy building of creosoted logs at the foot of the mountain. His hard, chunky body slipped easily off his horse near the stable. Coming around to the side, he saw a car in front and heard his wife, Kathy, talking to someone on the front steps. He leaned when he saw that it was Eleonore Lawrence. They shook hands cordially.

Kathy rose and said that she would get bread and milk for the two children, and cheese and sardines for them; Eleonore must eat a bite with them for who knew when there would be another opportunity? "Leaving town?" asked Eleonore. How soon did they expect to leave? Two weeks or less. "Spellunk" then asked, "And now with you—what's cooking?"

"An interest in caves."

"Is that a fact? What'd you mean—want to go in one?" He was suddenly radiant. "What cave do you plan to explore?"

"Tories!"

He shook his head. That wasn't the best one, by far.

"Have you been in Tories?" she inquired.

"Long ago. It's called Robbers' Roost, too; for in the fifties, some fellows hid there before robbing the Sweetwater Bank."

What a coincidence, thought Eleonore. She asked, "What's it like inside?"

"It has three big chambers, if I remember rightly, flint overlapping, no fretting, no carving, no stalactites—just a dumb ordinary cave."

"Are there bats?"

"Uh-huh; but they don't get in your hair. That's a fallacy." He spoke again after a minute's consideration. "See here, if you plan to go soon—I might be able to go with you."

Eleonore murmured "Thanks, Spellunk," but did not set a time for the expedition.

Kathy appeared just then with luncheon which they enjoyed, sitting on the steps and chatting.

Yes, they had heard from Art and they felt that the message came from Hawaii. He was engaged to Mercedes Lake, the girl with him at the country club party. And Eben was coming home from camp this weekend. . . . Eleonore really must fly now. Gran's medicine! She would call them and have them come to dinner before they left town.

She had waved goodbye and was shifting gears, when "Spellunk" called, "Hi—wait a minute!" She stopped in a few yards. When he came up to the window, he said, "Just another little tip on caves—never go in alone."

She smiled brilliantly. "Thanks a lot. See you soon."

"The Authority on Authorities"

"TO BE OR NOT TO BE"

HAMLET, in his notorious soliloquy, had nothing on the poor bridge player with his problem of "to cover or not to cover" when an opposing honor is face-up on the table. Usually a sound guide is the presence in your own hand of some lower honor or high spot card which might become a winner if you cover the instant honor, or the likelihood of such a secondary honor in your partner's hand. Lacking one or the other of these factors, you are usually better off to refrain from easing the declarer's path by covering.

West, after doubling, led his spade A, which was ruffed by South. The latter immediately led the heart J, which West covered with the Q, as a staunch observer of the antediluvian Whist rule to "always cover an honor with an honor." That solved South's only problem for him. He came up with the dummy's A, club three high spades for club discards—risky tactics—and then tried the obligatory club finesse.

When that worked, he scored the club A, ruffed the club J with the heart 9, ruffed a diamond, dropped the heart Q with the K and ran the rest of his hearts.

If West had not covered the heart Q, South would have had a problem, of finessing or trying to drop the Q in two rounds. If West had refrained from doubling and covering the honor, it is certain South, with nine trumps on his side, would have tried to drop the Q and would have been set. In fact, no matter what South then did, he would have been set.

Stalin in Good Health

Airlines Charge Army
And Navy Waste Planes

Special to Central Press

WASHINGTON—Reports that Marshal Stalin is failing in health run contrary to the evidence of persons who had a chance to see the Soviet chief closely at Potsdam. Army men who frequently attended the conference meetings, though not part of the delegations, declare that Stalin held up better than most of his colleagues.

Despite the heavy calendar of social events, punctuated by innumerable toasts in vodka, the generalissimo, they report, was more chipper than either of his opposite numbers, including Clement Attlee, and was more amenable to the many demands of conference photographers.

Rumors that Stalin's health was not too good cropped up when he delayed the Big Three conference due to a head cold.

COMMERCIAL AIRLINE EXPERTS are saying that both the Army and Navy waste many of the cargo and passenger planes now in their hands.

Hundreds of new potential passenger planes are going to the Naval Air transport and its Army counterpart, many of them not being used to full capacity. Commercial operators say they could get three times as much use out of the planes as the Army or Navy does.

Of course, the Army and Navy has no worry about upkeep costs, depreciation or the money that is lost when a plane is permitted to remain at one field too long.

GRANGE MEETING Dinner Is Given IS IN CHARGE For Returned Vet OF MR. BETHARDS

Dwight Bethards, worthy master, presided at the meeting of the Scioto Grange, Wednesday evening in the school auditorium. During the business meeting it was decided to purchase a flag to be hung in the auditorium. The committee reported the date for the picnic to be Friday, August 24, at Gold Cliff park at 6 p. m.

The program, the first of a series of programs to be carried out during the months of August and September, was given by the younger group. It was in charge of Mrs. Ben Grace and consisted of an opening song, "Battle Hymn of the Republic," by the group, a poem, "Faithless Nellie Gray," by Dwight Bethards, piano solo, Miss Doris Hill and a reading by Miss Betty Fields.

Miss Jackie Rush and Miss Nancy Green, accompanied by Miss Doris Hill, offered a duet and Miss Charlotte Holshue gave a piano solo. The closing song was sung by the group after a contest on musical selections. Refreshments were served at the close of the meeting by the committee, which was composed of, Fred Hudson, Paul Beers, and Otto Bethards. There were 40 members and juvenile members present. The room was decorated with flowers grown by Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Beatty.

Have a special place in your home for clean wrapping paper and for twine. Keep the other members of your family informed of its location.

These are the reasons why the increasing number of congressmen (including one of the highest administration leaders) were biting their lips during the latest hectic stages of Mr. Truman's negotiations. They were wondering how much of a job he had left himself to clean up later, when the final document is analyzed in complete detail.

WILLIAMSPORT 10 KNOCKED OUT OF DISTRICT PLAY

Williamsport was out of the district softball tournament Friday and the title game will be played tonight with Portsmouth and Chillicothe teams competing.

Williamsport bowed 2-1 to Portsmouth Ramey Feeds Thursday night in a semi-final game. Williamsport's only previous loss was to Allen's Pharmacy during the first round of play.

Ramey's defeated Galyean's Service of Portsmouth to qualify to play Williamsport. Both teams had been previously beaten by Blue Ribbon. Galyean's was defeated in the first round, then turned the tables when the club protested a second round game and Blue Ribbon was forced to return to the tournament after having defeated Ramey Feeds last Sunday.

Ramey's and Allen's Pharmacy will play at 8:30 tonight.

and Garret A. Van Riper, et al Defendants

Garret A. VanRiper, whose residence is unknown and can not be ascertained, is a defendant in a lawsuit, together with the undersigned, against the estate of Myron E. VanRiper, deceased.

Wilson, administrator with the will annexed of the estate of Myron E. VanRiper, deceased, filed his petition in the Probate Court within and for the County of Pickaway and State of Ohio, alleging that the personal estate of said decedent is insufficient to pay his debts and the charges of administering his estate; that he died seized in fee simple of the following described real estate, situated in the City of Cincinnati, County of Hamilton and State of Ohio, to-wit: Lot No. 4 and 12 feet in width off the west side of Lot No. 5 all in R. H. Bostwick's subdivision of lands in said city as recorded among the records of Pickaway County, Ohio, to which reference is hereby made.

The prayer of said petition is that the rights, interests and liens of said defendants be fully determined, adjudged and protected, and that the petitioner may be authorized and ordered to sell the real estate to pay the debts and costs aforesaid.

The persons first above mentioned will further take notice that they have been made parties defendant to said petition and that they are required to answer the same on or before the 1st day of September, 1945.

CHARLEY KELLER RETURNING TO HELP YANKEES

Reds Snap Losing Streak With Twin Win; Tribe Cops Close Game

NEW YORK, Aug. 17.—Maybe the Yankees won't have to wait until next year.

Talking pennant with the team involved in its longest losing streak of the season, seven straight games, sounds like something out of the hat, but with quick assistance from Uncle Sam it could be.

Charley Keller has swapped his Merchant Marine ensign's uniform for baseball flannels and may take over in the outfield by Sunday; Joe DiMaggio is expected to get his release from the Army any day now. Those pre-war sluggers, comprising the most powerful one-two punch of any major league club might make the difference with six weeks of the season remaining.

Already Charley (Red) Ruffing, the 42-year-old right hander who has won three out of four games, and Catcher Aaron Robinson have returned from the service to bolster the Yankee lineup. The club now is nine full games back of the Tigers but the distance might not be insurmountable with a powerful attack to back up a fairly good, though not brilliant pitching staff.

But the help will have to be forthcoming in a hurry. That was evident at St. Louis last night as the Browns came from behind to win, 7 to 2.

The Browns pulled into a fifth place tie with the Yankees, winning with a six-run rally in the sixth. Bob Muncie went the distance to gain his seventh victory against one defeat as his mates made 13 hits. Vern Stephens led the attack with two doubles and a single.

Hal Newhouse of the Tigers was an ample antidote for Emil (Dutch) Leonard of the Senators in the "crucial series" at Detroit. Newhouse beat Washington for his 11th straight win, 9 to 2, to gain his 19th win of the season and put Detroit three and a half games in front. The day before, Leonard won his fourth straight from the Tigers. Paced by Roy Cullenbine, who had a triple and two singles to drive in three runs, the Tigers made it easy for Newhouse yesterday with a 14-hit attack.

Dave Ferriss of the Red Sox made his first night game start and didn't like it. Trying for his 20th victory against the White Sox at Chicago, the big rookie was hammered for 12 hits before going out in the fifth and he was the loser, 11 to 3. It was his sixth defeat.

The Indians topped Philadelphia, 7 to 6, at Cleveland with a run in the ninth powered by Dutch Meyer's single. Jeff Heath hit a Cleveland homer.

Chicago's National League lead was reduced to five games at Brooklyn when the Dodgers evened the series with a 2 to 1 victory. Rookie Tom Seaver, slated for the Dodger discard ranks earlier in the season, turned in a steady seven-inning performance. Morever, he beat the league's leading pitcher, Hank Wyse, who was trying for his seventh loss. Seaver singled in Tom Brown, who had doubled, with the deciding run in the fourth.

Ken Burkhardt' two-hit pitching gave the Cardinals a 4 to 0 victory at Philadelphia. Buster Adams, with his 17th homer, and Floyd Young, with his first, gave Burkhardt all the offensive support he needed.

Cincinnati snapped its 13-game losing streak with a twin win at Boston, 5 to 3 and 8 to 3. Al Unser's two-run homer gave Joe Bowman his ninth victory in the opener. Vern Kennedy managed to strand 13 Braves on base to win the second game easily. Boston's Tommy Holmes boosted his major league leading homer total to 23 with three for the day.

Ace Adams saved Van Lingle Mungo's 2 to 1 Giant victory over the Pirates at New York by retiring the side with the bases filled in the ninth. It was Mungo's 13th win and Mel Ott started him off with his 17th homer. That blow in the fourth stopped Elwyn Roe's string of scoreless innings at 22 1/2.

Cincinnati snapped its 13-game losing streak with a twin win at Boston, 5 to 3 and 8 to 3. Al Unser's two-run homer gave Joe Bowman his ninth victory in the opener. Vern Kennedy managed to strand 13 Braves on base to win the second game easily. Boston's Tommy Holmes boosted his major league leading homer total to 23 with three for the day.

Ace Adams saved Van Lingle Mungo's 2 to 1 Giant victory over the Pirates at New York by retiring the side with the bases filling in the ninth. It was Mungo's 13th win and Mel Ott started him off with his 17th homer. That blow in the fourth stopped Elwyn Roe's string of scoreless innings at 22 1/2.

the airlines next month with a new all musical program.

Rosemarie Lombardo, Guy's younger sister, will handle all the femme singing chores on "Musical Autographs" each Tuesday, while the maestro and the boys are in Hollywood making a film for MGM.

Radio listeners very often fail to conceive the work that is required to whip a top flight radio program together. An insight into the painful efforts of stars, producers and engineers is given in the current issue of a national magazine (Saturday Evening Post) titled "Part Time Lunatic," the story about Ralph Edwards' "Truth or Consequences." In one instance, according to the story, Al Paschall, the only stage manager in radio, who supplies Ralph with zany props, spent twenty-four hours to erect an eighteen-foot tank and fill it with water for a stunt which lasted exactly two seconds.

Major network programs will start returning to the air from Summer hiatus in the near future. Joan Davis, who moves this autumn, returns September 3. Rudy Vallee comes back August 30. Judy Canova resumes September 1; Charlie McCarthy September 2; Bob Hope September 4; "Truth or Consequences" September 8. Burns and Allen's new series will make its premier September 6. Dave Elman will be represented by two shows this Fall. His "Hobby Lobby" resumes August 30 and his "Auction Gallery" starts a new series September 17.

Once again broadcasting from Hollywood, "Everything for the Boys" will tender a musical orchid to composer-conductor Gordon Jenkins, Tuesday, when the Rhythm Swingette sings "Ev'ry Time", the maestro's own song, on the global half-hour show. The movies didn't pan out very well, for the actor explains: "I didn't look like what I played, and I couldn't play what I looked like. In radio that doesn't matter."

MOHR IS "MURDERER"

Actor Jerry Mohr, "Hollywood Mystery Time" regular, is one of Hollywood's most prolific "murderers." # County Faced With Problem Caring For Unfortunate Children

COUNTY HOME CAN NOT CARE FOR ALL CASES

14 Children 'Boarded Out' In Private Homes; Court Cases Increasing

Pickaway county is faced with a major problem in caring for unfortunate children, Probate Judge Sterling M. Lamb revealed Friday.

An increased number of children, who have become wards of the court during the war, have filled to overflow the county children's home, Judge Lamb said. At the present time facilities to care for the children are inadequate.

"Besides the children's home, the county has children boarded out in 14 private homes," Mr. Lamb stated. Three of these homes are in Circleville, two in Stoutsville, and one each in Ashville, Jackson and Mt. Sterling.

These 8 homes, the judge pointed out, care for 14 children, in addition to a number being taken care of in free homes and the 41 now in the county children's home, and a number being taken care of by relatives. Altogether, 50 children are cared for outside the home.

For the 14 children kept in private homes, the county pays $52.25 per week, or $2,717 per annum. This figure is for room and board only. Any clothing the children get is extra expense for the county.

Judge Lamb pointed out that more and more children were coming into the care of the county through the probate and common pleas court, as a result of divorce cases and other circumstances which make it impossible for parents to keep their children.

He gave for an example the problem of one father who recently appealed to him for aid. The mother in the family had died recently. The father, who was left with 4 children to care for, worked near Columbus. He found it impossible to care for the children and to continue with his job.

Judge Lamb arranged for all the children, except the youngest, to be placed in a private home, where they could be given proper care and attention. Relatives took the baby of the family, and are caring for it.

As the problem now is, Judge Lamb concluded, and will be when more children are poured into the county home, the children's home is not large enough to accommodate its war and peace time burden.

RAILROAD FILM IS SHOWN AT ROTARY MEETING

An outline of the work done during the war by American railroads was given to members of the Rotary club Thursday by John G. Glasgow, representative of the magazine and advertising department of the Norfolk and Western Railway company. His speech preceded a film about the construction and maintenance of the N&W's steam locomotives.

Mr. Glasgow, who spoke to the Rotarians at their weekly meeting at the Pickaway Arms, pointed out the large amount of freight and number of passengers hauled by the railways since the beginning of the war.

The movie, depicting the story of the modern, coal-burning steam locomotive, showed N&W engines being built in their own shops in Virginia. The film emphasized the low cost of the engines and their availability and versatility.

Next week the Rotarians will hold a club assembly at the Pickaway Country club, instead of their regular weekly meeting at Pickaway Arms.

MANY OHIOANS JOBLESS TODAY

Curtiss-Wright And War Plants All Over State Closed Down

Thousands of war workers found themselves without jobs today as Ohio turned reluctantly from its two-day celebration of Japan's surrender to the intricate problems of reconversion.

All over the state, war plants were shut down or operating on a sharply cut-back basis. Many of them already were converting to peacetime production. Others will begin reconverting soon. But many were closed permanently.

Regional Director Edward L. Keenan of the War Manpower commission, said every effort would be made to place unemployed war workers in permanent peacetime jobs.

Even so, thousands of workers were expected to have to file claims for unemployment insurance with the bureau of unemployment compensation. The state legislature recently increased maximum benefits to $21 a week for 22 weeks.

Keenan said there still was no accurate estimate as to how many war workers would be laid off as a result of the sudden end of the war. But the number was expected to reach several hundred thousand within a few weeks.

Plants which had produced civilian goods before the war and had turned to war manufacture were not expected to cause too much trouble. These plants quickly will absorb their workers again once civilian production is resumed.

The real headaches, officials agreed, will be factories like the Curtiss-Wright navy dive bomber plant at Columbus and sprawling Ravenna ordnance center which were built specifically for the war.

Curtiss-Wright announced today that most of 17,500 workers would be laid off "indefinitely" as a result of navy contract cancellations. Some may return later in connection with experimental work. But thousands never will return.

Officials of the Atlas Powder Co., which operates the Ravenna Ordnance plant said they would comply immediately with government orders to put the center on a stand-by basis. Half of the center's 5,000 workers will be laid off by the end of the month, they said.

Keenan said one answer to anticipated unemployment was service jobs such as restaurants, laundries and dry cleaning. Most of these are comparatively low-paying jobs, however, and war workers accustomed to fat pay checks may not want to accept them.

These who do not take jobs to which they are referred by the bureau of unemployment compensation lose their benefits because they are not considered available for work and that may act as a lever to force them into such jobs.

Meanwhile, Gov. Frank J. Lausche instructed BUC administrator Charles H. Jones to get ready to handle an anticipated "deluge of applications." Lausche said he understood there would be 100,000 applications for unemployment insurance in Cleveland alone.

Lausche asked the board of control to permit the bureau to buy lumber without bids so it can construct counters over which benefit applications can be taken. He also told Jones to make sure he had plenty of help to process the applications.

The governor also indicated that he would seek a speedy repeal of the Ross act which permits war industries to work women and children up to 50 hours a week. The law was reenacted over labor's opposition in the last session of the legislature.

Under the provisions of the law, the governor can cancel the law by declaring that the war emergency is over.

County Faced With Problem Caring For Unfortunate Children

COUNTY HOME CAN NOT CARE FOR ALL CASES

Pickaway county is faced with a major problem in caring for unfortunate children, Probate Judge Sterling M. Lamb revealed Friday. An increased number of children, who have become wards of the court during the war, have filled to overflowing the county children's home, Judge Lamb said. At the present time facilities to care for the children are inadequate. "Besides the children's home, the county has children boarded out in 8 private homes," Mr. Lamb stated. Three of these homes are in Circleville, two in Stoutsville, and one each in Ashville, Jackson and Mt. Sterling.

These 8 homes, the judge pointed out, care for 14 children, in addition to a number being taken care of in free homes and the 41 now in the county children's home, and a number being taken care of by relatives. Altogether, 50 children are cared for outside the home.

For the 14 children kept in private homes, the county pays $52.25 per week, or $2,717 per annum. This figure is for room and board only. Any clothing the children get is extra expense for the county.

Judge Lamb pointed out that more and more children were coming into the care of the county through the probate and common pleas court, as a result of divorce cases and other circumstances which make it impossible for parents to keep their children.

He gave for an example the problem of one father who recently appealed to him for aid. The mother in the family had died recently. The father, who was left with 4 children to care for, worked near Columbus. He found it impossible to care for the children and to continue with his job.

Judge Lamb arranged for all the children, except the youngest, to be placed in a private home, where they could be given proper care and attention. Relatives took the baby of the family, and are caring for it.

As the problem now is, Judge Lamb concluded, and will be when more children are poured into the county home, the children's home is not large enough to accommodate its war and peace time burden.
